The employee is a MERCHANT—selling his time—and what he can accomplish in the time that he sells.

The company is a lot of stockholders contributing money to buy the time of the merchant—the company is the CONSUMER—the employer.

Which is the more HONEST—the storekeeper merchant, who sells a pound and a half of butter for two pounds, and makes 15 cents by stealing it from you, or the employee who steals fifteen minutes out of an hour, and thereby gains 15 cents dishonestly? One merchant pretends to deliver two pounds of butter, and delivers short weight while the other merchant pretends to deliver an hour of work and delivers short measure.

The employee screams "murder" if the storekeeper gives short measure, but wants full pay for short measure when he can skin his employer out of fifteen minutes an hour.

All we want to know, which is the more honest?

If one merchant sells sugar which has one pound of sand mixed with it to give it weight, is there any difference between that merchant and the merchant that sells one hour of labor with fifteen minutes of idleness mixed in?

Both are petty larceny thieves.

SHOWING THE SAFFRON.

THE true yellow of the cowards who dynamited innocent men and women and plotted the destructions of scores of others has come to the surface in a petition to the Department of Justice asking for clemency that they may be saved from punishment. First they protested their innocence, next they alleged they were victims of unscrupulous capitalists who were being railroaded to the gallows and now, after exhausting every resource that money could buy they throw themselves on the mercy of the court.

This is an immaculate and superb gall that reveals the moral turpitude of the offenders. Convicted before the whole world of a series of crimes that stand without a peer in the criminal history of civilization, they protest their right to kill, maim and destroy. Property has no rights in their gaze. Life is a paltering gift that the Maker gave to be destroyed at the whim of dark lantern junta and the sanctity of the home was no protection from their murderous passions. Wives and daughters of their suspected enemies suffered from their malice with as little thought as they would give a rabid dog. Age or sex failed to appeal to these despoilers of homes and destroyers of Unionism whose malevolent machinations set back the cause of organized labor twenty years.

They made their bed and they should have the manhood to lie on it. They are not entitled to the slightest sympathy or consideration. They had the black hearts of murderers but they did not have the nerve to execute their own devilish plans. While they hid behind the safeguard of hidden identity they hired such odious creatures as McGonigal to do their dirty work and when the courts of justice pulled the masks off their faces their craven natures were also exposed. Now they beg for mercy. They gave no mercy and are not entitled to any. The blood of innocents cry out for vengeance and the cry should be heeded. Let them serve their terms in jail and be thankful that their lives are spared from extinction on the scaffold where they should stand today.

gether and boost for the whole State. Bring the tourists here and somebody will profit from the advertising. While the southern route is acknowledged to be the best all-year-round route there always will be a few who prefer to take the main line through to Truckee. The Department of Agriculture is issuing a circular entitled "How to Raise Sugar Beets." For this section of the country where the sugar factories have closed the Bonanza thinks the best way is to elect a Republican administration.

Senator Thomas of Colorado is a good fighter. He recently won a fight against the Denver Water Company after staying with the game for twenty years. Pittman better look out.

WANTS RAILROAD FARE BACK TO CARSON CITY

Austin Jackson, secretary to the board of pardons, is in receipt of a communication dated Carthage, Ill., signed D. B. Orton. Orton will be remembered as the faultlessly dressed youth who was galavanting around Carson with some of the witnesses in the recent trial of the white slave case in the Federal court.

D. B. Orton, alias Black, is the individual who some years ago raised a check on the First National Bank of Tonopah, was apprehended in Goldfield and sentenced to the care of the warden at the state prison.

The board of pardons at the last meeting paroled Black, who departed for his former home in Illinois to join his youthful wife and baby, the latter having arrived during his absence. He got into trouble with his family and is now in jail at Carthage, where he refuses to furnish bonds to keep the peace, claiming that his people are trying to get rid of him. He has notified Secretary Jackson that he is willing to return and serve the balance of his sentence without the necessary legal papers.

At that he is a little short of ready money and desires the assistance of the board in procuring the necessary transportation. As his term of imprisonment has practically expired it is unlikely the board will comply with his wishes.—Carson News.
